PDI World Group Does Business in Dubai

Minneapolis, MN, June 4, 2007 – PDI World Group, an architectural firm founded last year by noted Minneapolis architect Steve Huh, continues to expand its international portfolio with a dramatic new 25-story office tower in the Business Bay district of Dubai.

By many accounts, Dubai is the fastest-growing city in the world, much of it targeting tourism and international business. At the forefront of this business development is the Business Bay District, a ground-up development encompassing 64 million square feet along Sheikh Zayed Road between Dubai Creek and the seacoast, adjacent to Downtown Dubai. Business Bay is a carefully planned, architecturally significant, upscale free-zone development attracting corporate tenants from all over the world. The developers' intent is to firmly establish Dubai as the region's business capital with a business and financial district that will rival Manhattan or Tokyo's Ginza.

PDI is proud to have been selected as one of the early partners in the Business Bay District. In addition to the office tower currently in design, two more projects are pending.

Huh, FAIA, who was formerly President and CEO of The Leonard Parker Associates.
